TEQUILA & MEZCAL

"All tequilas are mezcals, but not all mezcals are tequilas"

While tequila is only made from a single agave varietal – Agave Tequilana (or blue weber agave), mezcal can be made from any one of over 30 different agave species. Espadín is the most commonly cultivated agave varietal for mezcal today, but mezcal can be also made from wild agave varietals such as Tobalá, Arroqueño and Mexicano.

Both tequila and mezcal are made from the harvested core of the agave plant known as the “piña” and that’s where the similarities in production end.

Tequila is typically produced by steaming the agave inside industrial ovens before being distilled two or three times.

Mezcal, on the other hand, is cooked inside earthen pits that are lined with lava rocks and filled with wood and charcoal before being distilled in clay pots which explain the smokey finish taste.
